

Mediatonic Go Extreme

Next iPhone Title Revealed - Extreme Lawn Bowls to Revolutionise Lawn Bowling Genre

16th September 2009

Mediatonic, the London-based social gaming specialist, has announced its next iPhone title, Extreme Lawn Bowls. Giving players unprecedented power in the ultimate lawn bowling simulation, Extreme Lawn Bowls promises to revolutionise its genre in much the same way that Mediatonic's previous iPhone title, Must.Eat.Birds, changed the landscape of cake defense games forever.

Extreme Lawn Bowls puts the player in the highly-skilled body of one of eight world-class competitors, each with their own special moves and unlockable bowl types. Competition within the high-octane world of Extreme Lawn Bowls is fierce, with four tiers of story mode and eight tournament trophies to win for the single player. A turn-based multiplayer mode allows up to six players to battle it out for ultimate bowls supremacy and an additional Score Attack mode fills the bowling arena with all manner of score-increasing bumpers, holes and tunnels for the player to rack up their highest score with five bowls.

Extreme Lawn Bowls will be available on the App Store in October.

For urgent updates and secret information, follow Mediatonic on Twitter:

<http://twitter.com/Mediatonic>

For more information, contact Tony Coles at Peppermint P:

tony.coles@peppermintp.com

+44 (0)207 2402645

About Mediatonic:

Mediatonic was formed in 2005 to produce high-quality browser-based social gaming solutions for clients predominately within the entertainment industries. Based in the west end of London, England, Mediatonic's team of 20 is dedicated to creating the best games they can, packing each release with passion, love and the utmost attention to detail. For more information, visit www.mediatonic.co.uk